DRIVE TIME

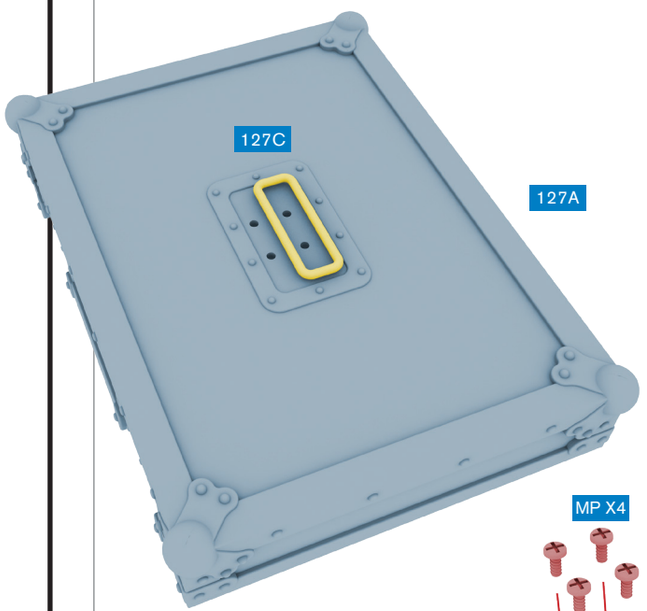

Begin constructing the plutonium case for your DeLorean

Follow the illustrated guide to begin constructing a case of plutonium to accompany your DeLorean.

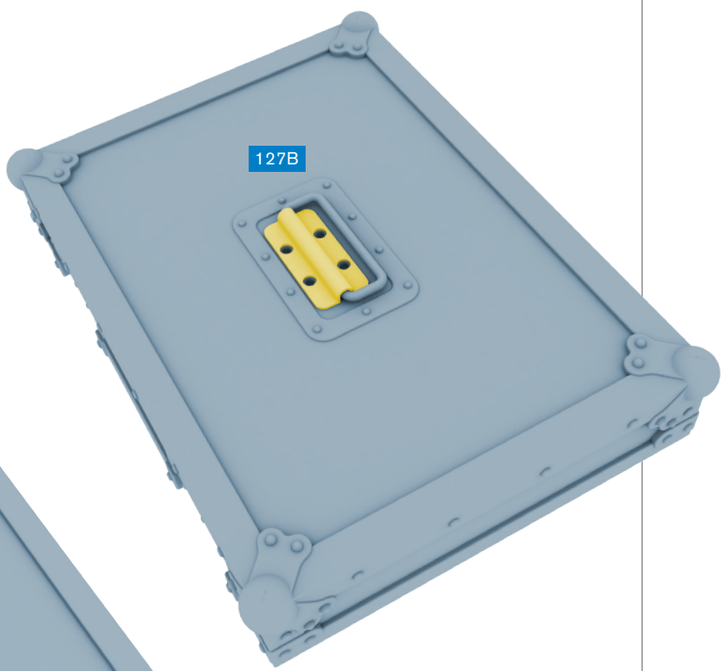

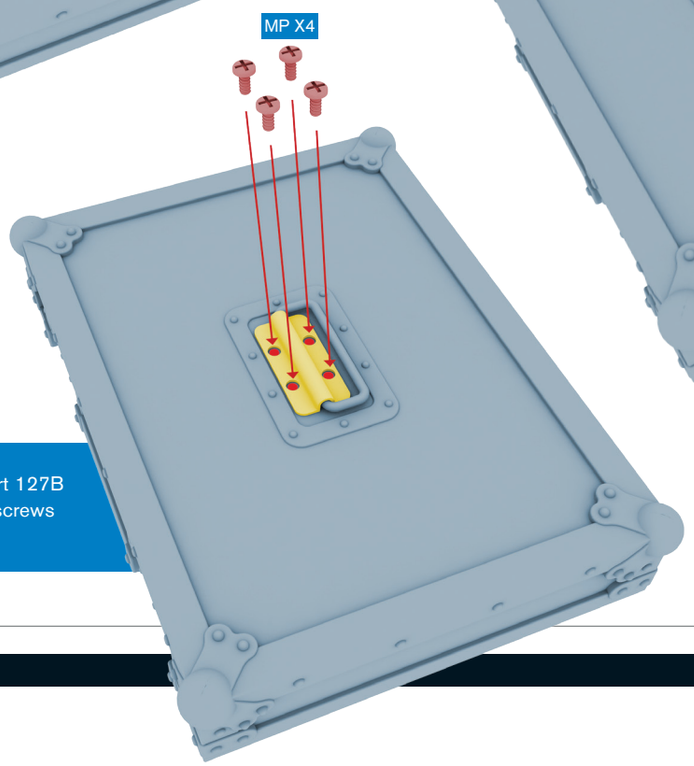

PLUTONIUM CASE LID

STEP 1 ›› Position part 127C on top of part 127A as shown.

STEP 2 ›› Place part 127B on top of 127C.

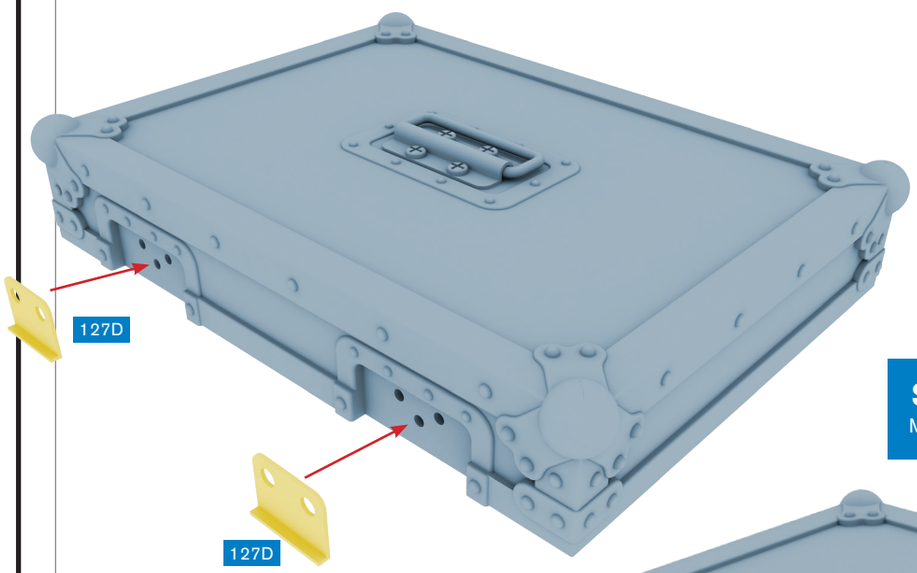

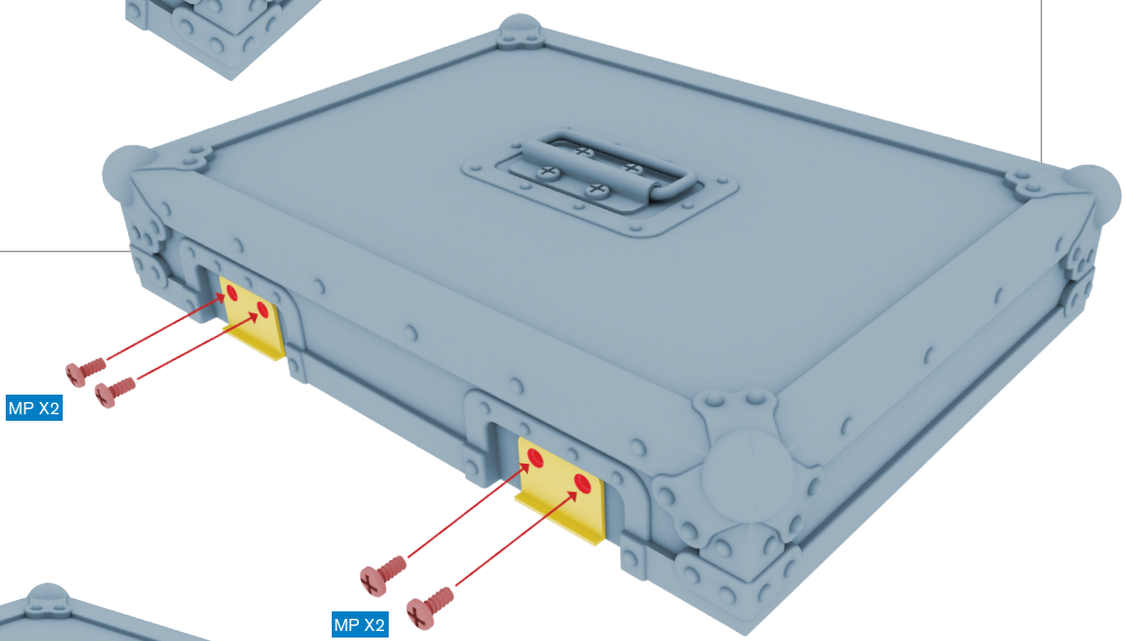

STEP 3 ›› Fix part 127B in place with four MP screws in the holes shown.

DOC & MARTY ON JIMMY KIMMEL LIVE!

21ST OCTOBER 2015

On the famous date that Marty visits in 2015, Michael J. Fox and Christopher Lloyd brought Marty and Doc Brown back to the screen.

ACCORDING TO MY CALCULATIONS

On Jimmy Kimmel Live! on 21st October 2015, Michael J. Fox and Christopher Lloyd appeared together in character as Doc and Marty for the first time since 1990.

The late-night talk show Jimmy Kimmel Live! was created and hosted by comedian Jimmy Kimmel, and is broadcast nightly on ABC. The show made its debut on 26th January 2003, as part of ABC's programming for that year's Super Bowl.

Kimmel soon became a fixture of ABC's programming, winning fans with his everyman persona and mixture of irreverent monologues, celebrity interviews, music guests and stunts. In 2018, Jimmy Kimmel Live! became the longest running late-night talk show in ABC's history at 16 years and counting. As an example of his standing in the show business fraternity, Kimmel was invited to host the Academy Awards in 2017 and 2018.

Kimmel is a big fan of Back to the Future, and on 21st October 2015, the date that Marty travels to in Back to the Future Part II, Kimmel and his team arranged something very special. While

DOC & MARTY, TOGETHER AGAIN

Jimmy Kimmel's opening monologue is interrupted by Marty and Doc, who find life in the future rather underwhelming.

Michael J. Fox and Christopher Lloyd had appeared on TV together before, this was the first time that they were reunited in character as Marty McFly and Doc Brown, with a DeLorean, too. Both actors seemed to enjoy themselves enormously.

Kimmel kicks off his show each night with an opening monologue, in the style established by the chat show greats such as Johnny Carson and David Letterman. On the 21st October show, he begins by noting the date and observing its significance for Back to the Future fans. But no sooner has he spoken when the lights dim, there is a flash of lightning and smoke pours onto the stage. To the accompaniment of Alan Silvestri's instantly recognizable theme, the DeLorean rolls majestically onto the stage, and Marty McFly and Doc Brown emerge, to earsplitting applause.

As the applause dies down, the pair step forward. 'Great Scott!' says Doc. 'According to my calculations, this is the year 2015, Marty... The future!'

'2015, that's heavy,' Marty sighs. 'All these people must have got here in their flying cars.' Kimmel approaches them to point out that we never quite figured out flying cars.

ALL THIS AND HUEY, TOO

Huey Lewis was on hand to provide some music and to complain that Doc and Marty were 'just too darn loud'.

BROUGHT DOWN TO SIZE

'Who are you?' Marty asks.

Kimmel explains that they have traveled into the middle of his talk show.

'You have a talk show?' Doc exclaims. 'What happened to Johnny Carson?' Kimmel informs him that Johnny Carson is sadly not around any more.

THEY'RE WATCHING US?

'Are people watching us on TV right now?' Marty asks. 'People are watching us on TV right now,' Kimmel explains, 'although honestly, most people will probably watch this on their phones on the toilet tomorrow.' Doc and Marty are alarmed. 'It's better than it sounds,' Kimmel assures them, 'It's really actually kinda fun.'

'At least you've got hoverboards,' says Doc.

'They call them hoverboards but they're not really hoverboards,' says Kimmel forlornly. Marty is even more shocked to find out peace had still not been achieved in the Middle East.

'If you don't mind me asking,' he says, 'what the hell have you guys been doing for 30 years?'

Kimmel takes a while to think of anything. 'We invented this thing called the cronut. It's like part croissant and part donut. Really good.'

Marty is not impressed. 'Doc, it seems like 2015 kind of sucks,' he observes. Doc agrees that the technological and cultural achievements of this era are somewhat underwhelming.

Kimmel takes a selfie, saying 'This is how we document important life events now.' Doc marvels at the 'portable telecommunications device' which, Kimmel admits, we use for sending each other smiley faces and pictures of eggplants.

After an interruption from Huey Lewis, who pops up

'You have a talk show? What happened to Johnny Carson?'

CHRISTOPHER LLOYD AS DOC BROWN

with a loudhailer to complain that 'You're just too darn loud', Doc realizes what's happened. 'We must have traveled to an alternate 2015 where human evolution has been stopped by superfluous technology.'

BACK TO 1985

Doc tells Marty that he will return to 1985 and repair the space time continuum. And Jimmy Kimmel announces that after the break, he'll be interviewing Michael J. Fox. 'Teen Wolf?' Marty asks hopefully.

The show continued with a song from Huey Lewis, a pre-filmed sequence in which Doc flies off back to 1985 and an interview with Michael J. Fox in which he discusses the Back to the Future phenomenon. It was a great treat for Back to the Future fans, but it was by no means the only event to mark 21st October 2015, hereafter known as 'Future Day'. We will be looking at some more of those celebrations in upcoming issues! ■

SUPERFLUOUS TECHNOLOGY

Above, Kimmel takes a selfie with Doc and Marty. This special episode was taped at the Brooklyn Academy of Music's Howard Gilman Opera House, and also appearing on the show was the Democratic Presidential candidate, Senator Bernie Sanders. Below, the host tries to explain why we don't have flying cars yet, but we have invented the cronut.

'C'mon, let's get you a radiation suit, we must prepare to reload!'

SUITED UP

RADIATION PROTECTION

Doc and Marty don protective gear as they place a plutonium rod into the DeLorean's reactor.

'Does it run on regular unleaded gasoline?' Marty asks, after witnessing the inaugural journey of the DeLorean. 'Unfortunately no,' Doc replies. 'It requires something with a little more kick – plutonium!'

Doc explains that he needs a nuclear reaction to generate the 1.21 gigawatts required for time-travel. He duped a gang of Libyan nationalists to get hold of their plutonium. But time is short and there is much to be done. 'C'mon, let's get you a radiation suit, we must prepare to reload.'

Marty's bright yellow suit is too big for him and he has difficulty keeping the video camera pointed at Doc as he reverently takes a glass tube out of the case marked 'plutonium'. Inside the clear container is a tube of blood-red liquid. Doc carefully inserts the glass vessel into the DeLorean's reactor, twists it, and the liquid is sucked into the machine.

Marty is still wearing the radiation suit when, moments later, he is catapulted through time. In 1955, the futuristic suit gets him mistaken for an invading alien, but it eventually comes in very useful when Marty gives his father George a helpful shove in the right direction... ■

QUICK FACTS!

HAZMAT SUITS

● A radiation suit, also known as hazmat suit (hazardous materials suit) or decontamination suit, is an impermeable whole-body garment worn as protection against hazardous materials. It can provide protection from nuclear agents through radiation shielding in the lining, but more importantly by preventing direct contact with, or inhalation, of radioactive particles or gas. Protective clothing is classified as Level A, B, C or D based on the degree of protection they provide. A is the highest level of protection, as worn by Marty and Doc Brown.
