Assembling the Bow

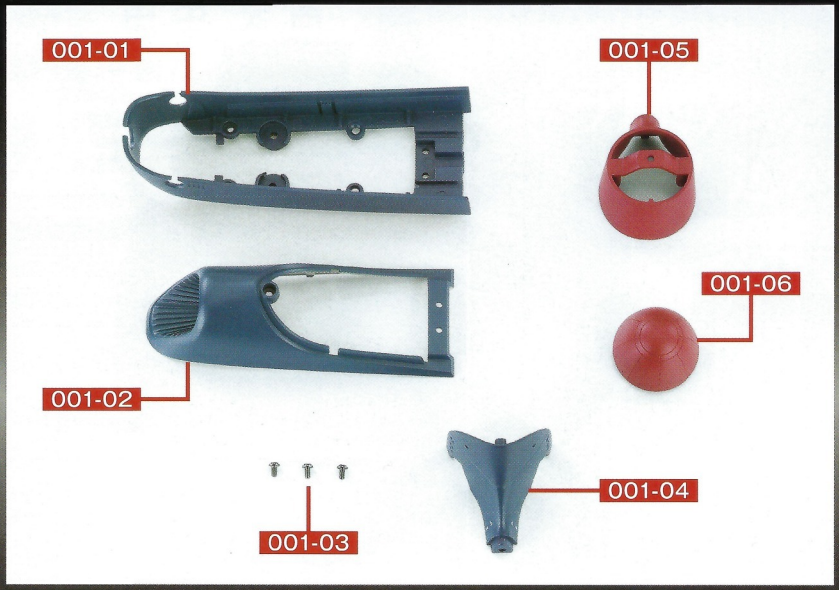

This issue: the Bow

Let's begin building the 1/350 scale Yamato (First Refit). Issue 1 starts with the bow, which carries the bulbous bow and the Wave-Motion Gun, Yamato's most distinctive feature.

Issue 001 Parts

Parts List

Part No.	Qty	Material
☐ 001-01	1	Zinc die-cast
☐ 001-02	1	Zinc die-cast
☐ 001-03	3 (1 spare)	Steel
☐ 001-04	1	Zinc die-cast
☐ 001-05	1	Zinc die-cast
☐ 001-06	1	Zinc die-cast

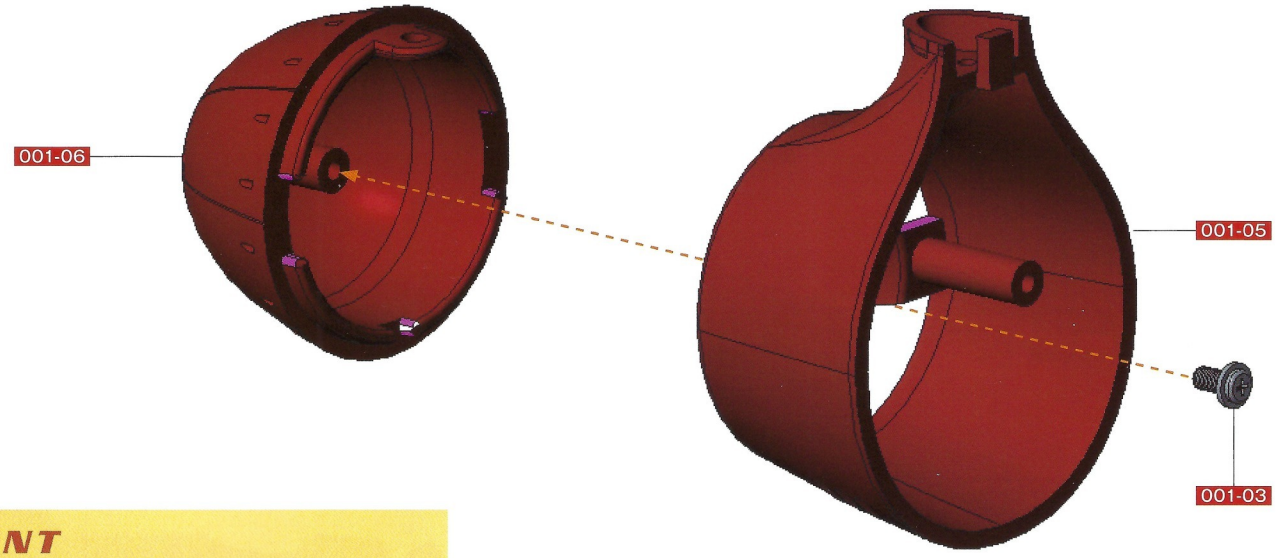

Tools needed Screwdriver * 001-01 001-02 are not used in this issue. Store them safely for a later issue.

⚠ Handling Precautions & Requests

- Metal and plastic parts may have sharp points. Take care not to injure yourself.
- Keep parts out of children's reach so they cannot put them in their mouths. If a part is swallowed, see a doctor at once.
- This product is for ages 14 and up.

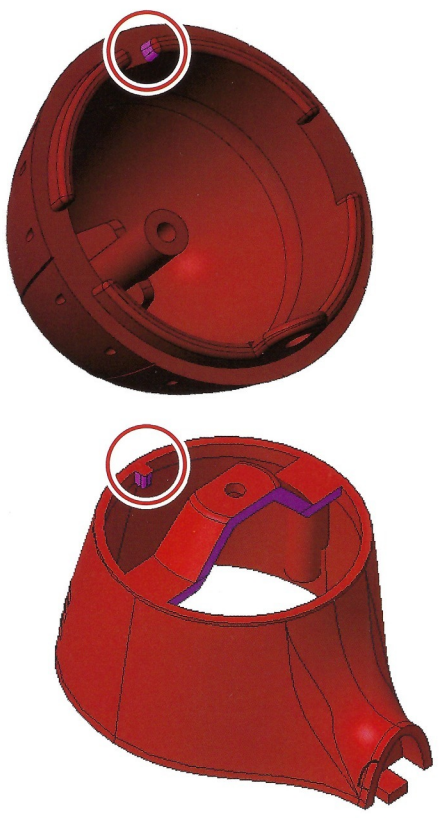

Step 1 Assembling the Bulbous Bow

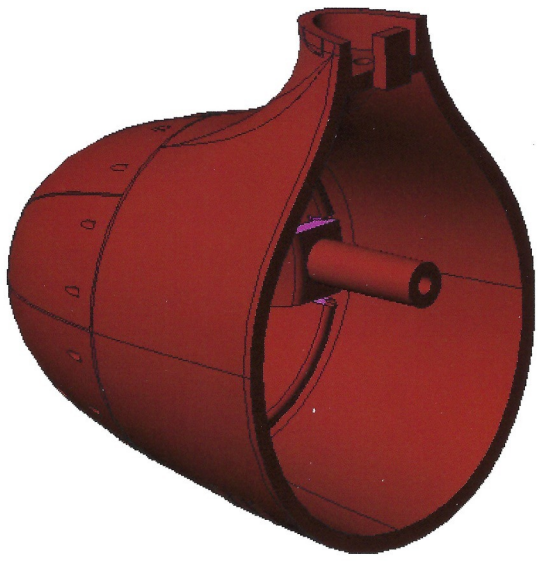

Into bulbous bow rear 001-05 , fit bulbous bow front 001-06 and fix it with 001-03 screw.

POINT

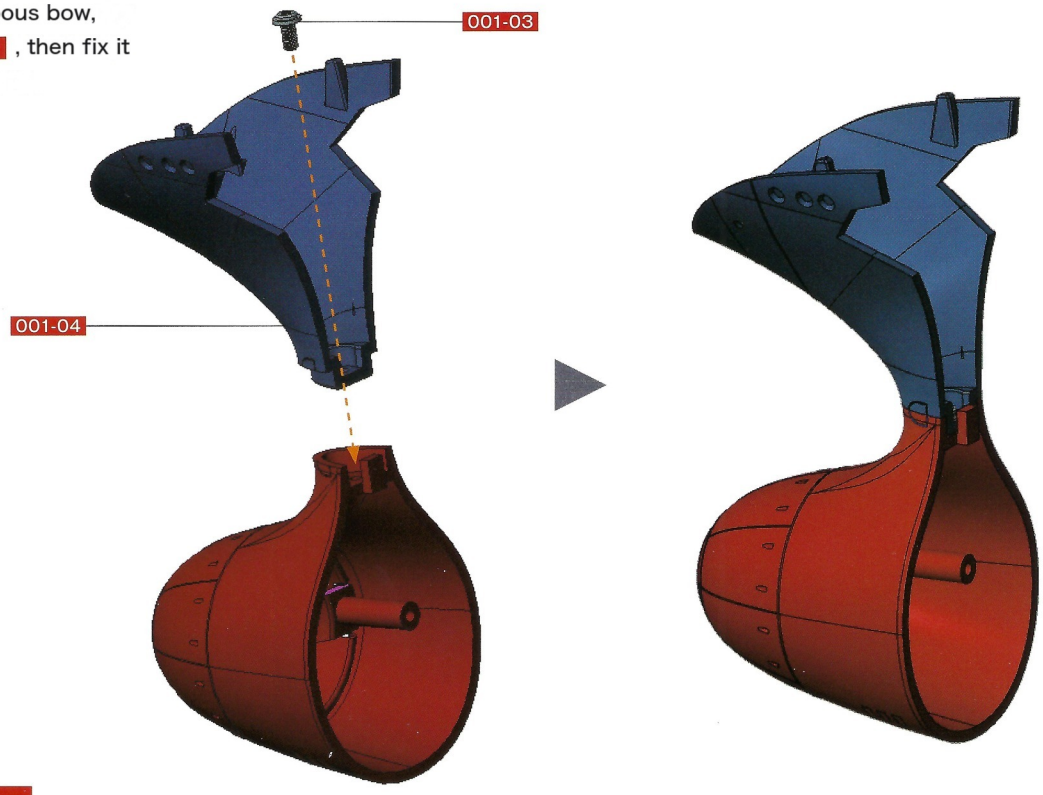

Bulbous bow front 001-06 has a notch; the bulbous bow rear 001-05 tab fits into it.
Check that it is firmly seated.

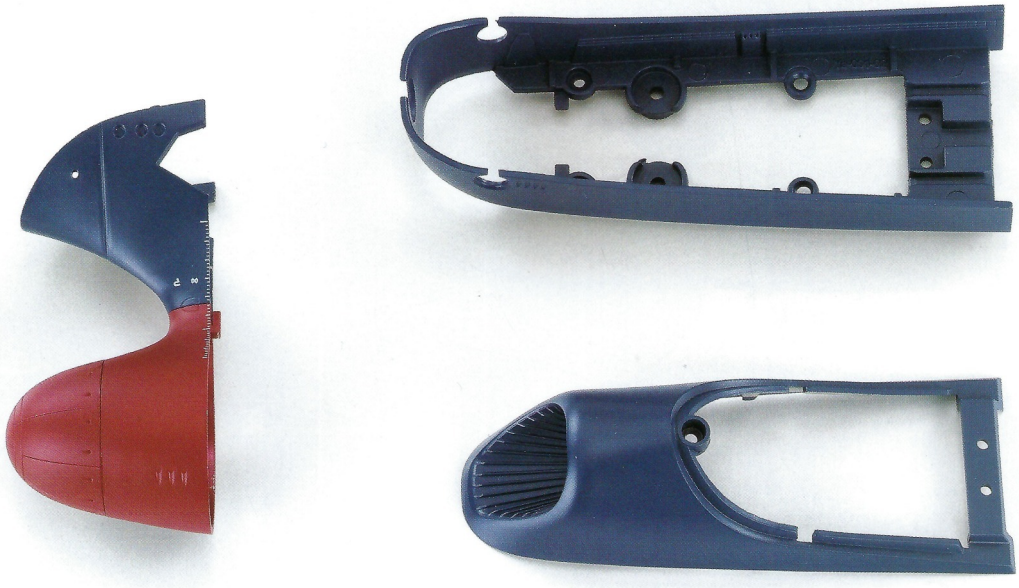

Step 2 Assembling the Bow

Onto the STEP 1 bulbous bow, fit bow panel 001-04 , then fix it with 001-03 screw.

BBY-01 Yamato-class Lead Ship

YAMATO (First Refit)

Shiro Sanada's agonising decision set the Yamato rebuild plan in motion. Reborn, Yamato would take on new duties as the "First Refit" type.

On the unauthorised departure from Earth, Susumu Kodai was both Acting Captain and Tactical Chief. Ryu Hijikata, once demoted to commander of the Outer Ocean Defense Division, later became her second captain.

Earth's most decorated warship returns, Wave-Motion Gun re-armed

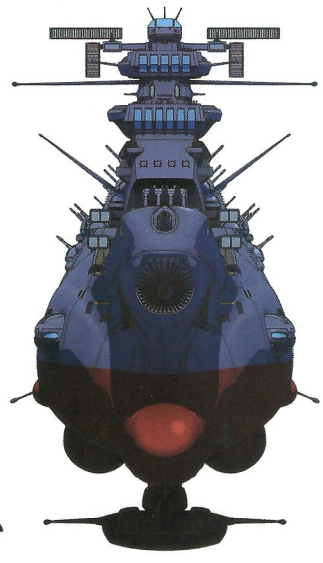

After returning from Iscandar, BBY-01 Yamato, lead ship of the Yamato class, was laid up for a time in an undersea dock as a memorial ship. Then, under the Earth Federation government's "Wave-Motion Gun Fleet Concept", she was ordered back to the battle line. She was refitted for the purpose and reborn as the "First Refit" type.

The first refit, under the Yamato rebuild plan, brought many changes, starting with the re-installation of the Wave-Motion Gun. The main ones were: a reshaped bow fairlead; added volume around the bulbous bow and torpedo tubes; a bulge in the lower hull, as seen in cross-section; larger main thrust nozzles; larger main turrets with thicker turret armour; changed heights for some turrets; the triple high-angle guns beside the No. 2 secondary turrets replaced by eight twin high-angle turrets; a new No. 4 bridge aft of the No. 2 secondary turret base; and, by sharply cutting the living quarters, more onboard factory space and reserve materials.

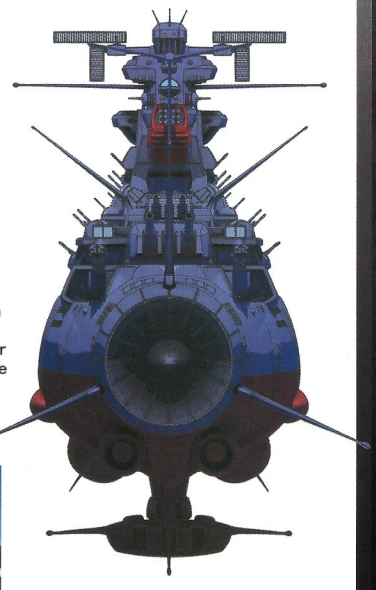

This series of refits fixed the weak points of the maiden voyage. Then, in the hands of her old crew, who had received the message from Telezart, Yamato left Earth in what amounted to a mutiny.

Respecting their pact with Starsha, Kodai and the former crew opposed re-arming the Wave-Motion Gun. Kodai would later face an agonising decision over its use.

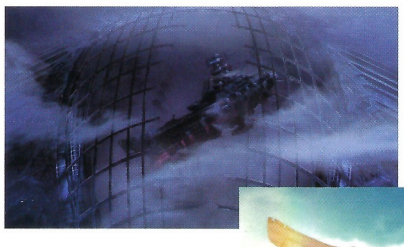

Specs SPEC

Length: 333 m
Main engine: Type-Ro Kanpon Model-I wave-motion boiler ×1 (Wave-Motion Engine)
Sub-engine: Kanpon cosmo-turbine Kai ×8, 2 shafts
Gun armament:

- Dimensional wave-motion implosion projector (Wave-Motion Gun)
- 48 cm triple positron shock cannon turret ×3
- 20 cm triple positron shock cannon turret ×2
- Torpedo tubes ×12 (bow and stern, both sides)
- Torpedo tubes ×16 (both broadsides)
- 8-cell missile tower ×1 (aft of bridge)
- Type 94 depth-charge launcher ×2 (main-mast base, both sides)
- Missile launcher ×10 (hull bottom)
- AA pulse laser turrets, many (both sides)

Yamato shelling a Calaklum-class ship through the ceiling of the undersea dock, mid-refit. After further work she returned to service as the First Refit type.

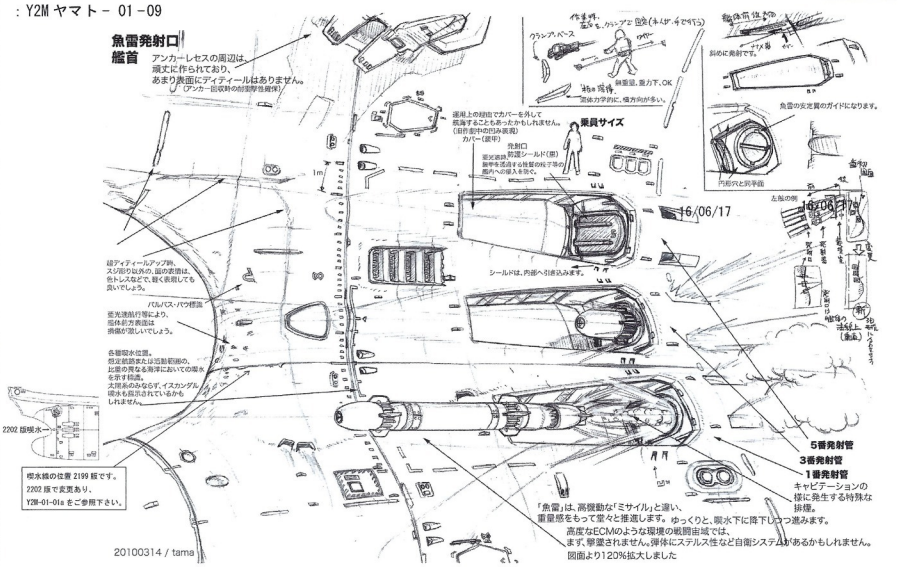

With the crew aboard, Yamato sailed out in what amounted to a mutiny. As many of her crew from 2199 had rejoined, she ran smoothly.

Bow

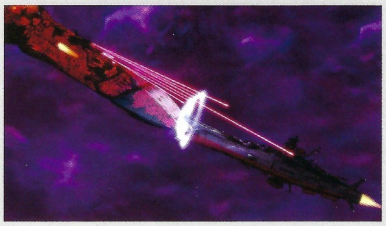

The Yamato rebuild plan also reworked the area around the bow, adding volume around the bulbous bow and the torpedo tubes. The torpedo tubes were renumbered too: on the port side they are Nos. 1, 3 and 5 from the bottom (on the starboard side, Nos. 6, 4 and 2 from the bottom).

As a result of the refit, displacement rose sharply and the waterline rose by about 1.4 m. The bow is extremely rugged and, combined with the Wave-Motion Shield, can withstand contact with ships larger than Yamato.

Two types are fitted: attitude-control nozzles and high-output combat thrusters. The former are used in normal cruising, the latter in combat. The attitude-control nozzles are the same type as before the refit and in the same positions, but their output seems to have been raised.

Forward-Armed Space Warship AAA-1

Andromeda

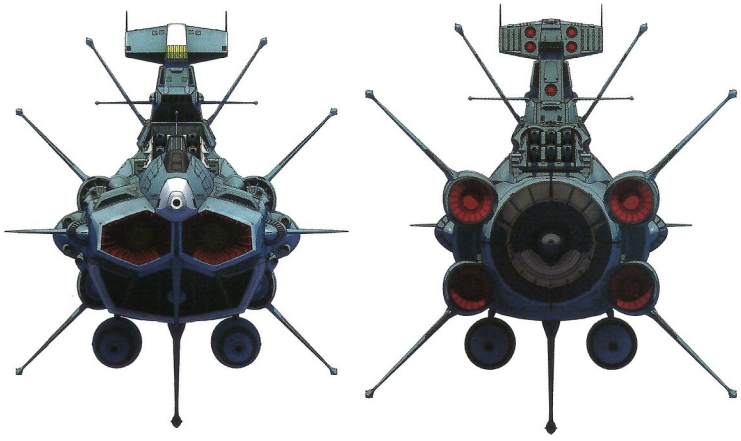

In the [Operation to Retake Floating Continent 8], one shot of Andromeda's Spread Wave-Motion Gun wiped out the Gatlantis fleet, reversing a losing battle and showing all her overwhelming power.

Osamu Yamanami, once captain of the Kirishima, flagship of the old Combined Space Fleet, took command of Andromeda (rank: Captain 1st Class), carrying out missions with a realist's eye.

Wave-Motion Warship: Symbol of the Postwar EDF

The forward-armed space warship AAA-1 Andromeda is the lead ship of the Andromeda class, Wave-Motion-Engine warships built after the war against Garmillas.

Rushed into service as supreme flagship of the EDF space fleet under the quietly pursued [Wave-Motion Gun Fleet Plan], her defining feature is the twin Wave-Motion Gun in her bow. Evolved from Yamato's, it fires a spread of Wave-Motion energy to hit many targets at once, hence its popular name, the "Spread Wave-Motion Gun."

She also carries new-concept anti-air weapons and subspace torpedoes, based on lessons from the Garmillas war, and is said to outfight Yamato.

Automation also cuts her crew drastically: the bridge can be run by just four (captain, XO, Tactical Chief doubling as navigator, and comms chief).

Committed in secret to the [Operation to Retake Floating Continent 8], her first action, Andromeda showed her full power.

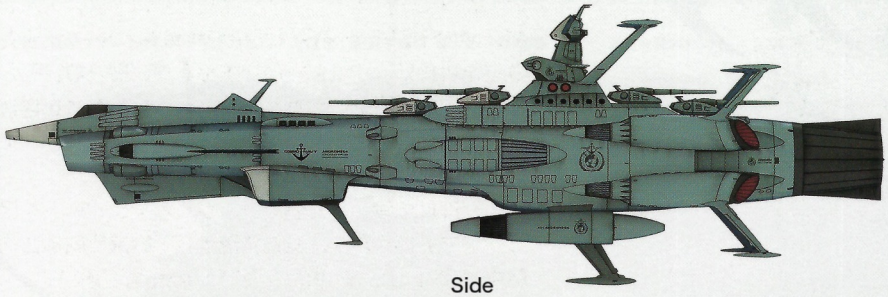

Specifications SPEC

Length: 444 m
Main engine: Dimensional Wave-Motion Engine ×1
Sub-engine: Kelvin impulse engine ×4
Armament:

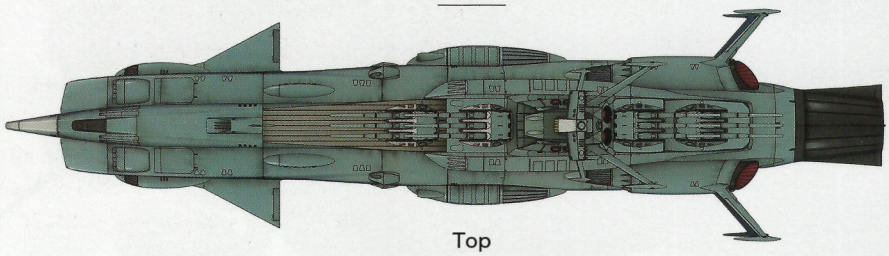

- Twin Dimensional Wave-Motion Implosion Projector (aka Spread Wave-Motion Gun)
- 40.6 cm triple focused-compression shock cannon turret ×4
- Rapid-fire torpedo tube ×4
- Graviton spread launcher ×4
- Small torpedo tube ×8
- Quad anti-ship grenade launcher ×2
- Subspace torpedo launcher ×4
- Bridge-guard shock field gun ×3
- Close-combat 6-barrel side beam gun ×2
- AA pulse laser turret ×4
- Spread AA pulse laser turret ×1

Hull Structure

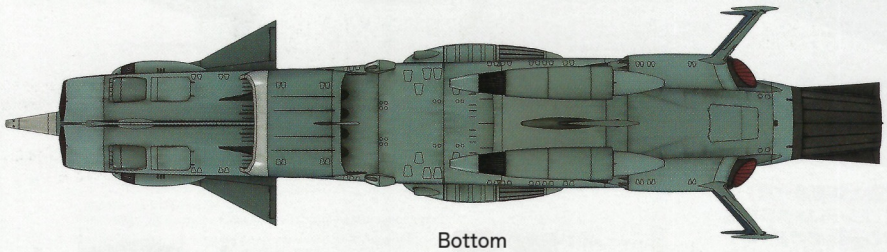

The Andromeda class can be called a special variant of the Class D, the main ship of the [Wave-Motion Gun Fleet Plan]. The Class D is a new design based on the Garmillas Gaiderol-class battleship; it and its development, the Andromeda class, show the technology brought in from Garmillas. The class code AAA stands for "Advanced Ability Armament". Besides the name ship Andromeda, four sister ships were built (two of them carriers).

Side

Top

Bottom

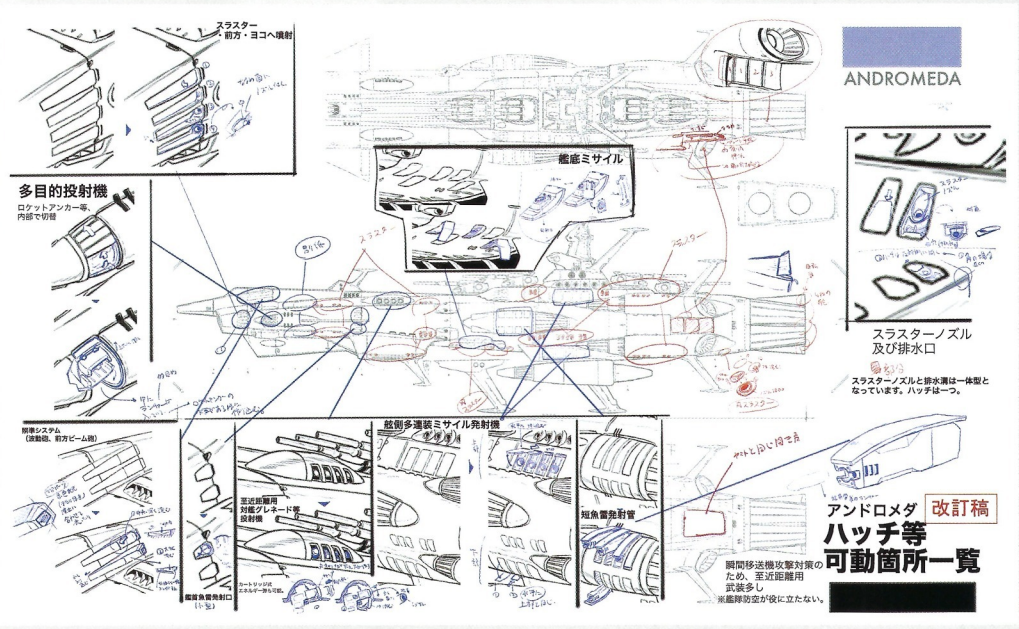

At 444 m, Andromeda is more than twice as long as the earlier Kongo-kai-type main battleship, yet labour-saving operation keeps her crew to about 200.

Andromeda closes with Yamato behind her Wave-Motion Shield in the pursuit of Yamato. The shield is also applied to the shock field guns, which guard the bridge tower with spatial shock waves.

Armament & Gimmicks

Besides the Spread Wave-Motion Gun, a hallmark of the Andromeda class is its rethought anti-air armament. After Yamato's hard fights against Garmillas raids using short-range warps, the class gained anti-ship grenade launchers, spread-type pulse laser guns and more to boost close-combat firepower and defence. It also carries a Wave-Motion Shield with better shot deflection and longer duration, plus shock field guns that apply the same technology.

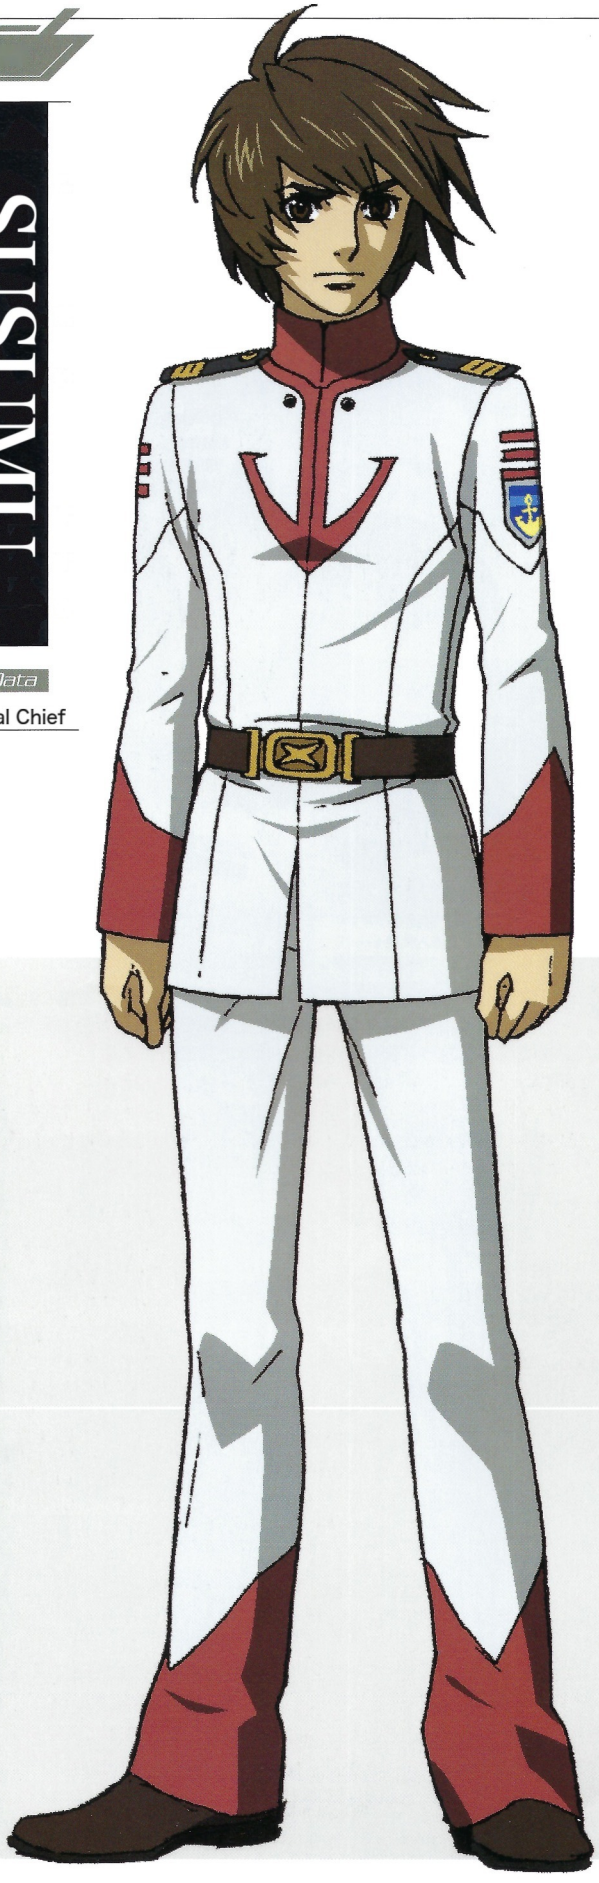

The drawing at left shows the weapons and thruster nozzles placed around the hull. The main guns fire both beams and live shells; smaller in calibre than Yamato's, they perform better thanks to improvements.

SUSUMU KODAI

Personal Data

Post: Tactical Chief
Age: 24

▶ Taking the Reborn Yamato's Helm in Anguish

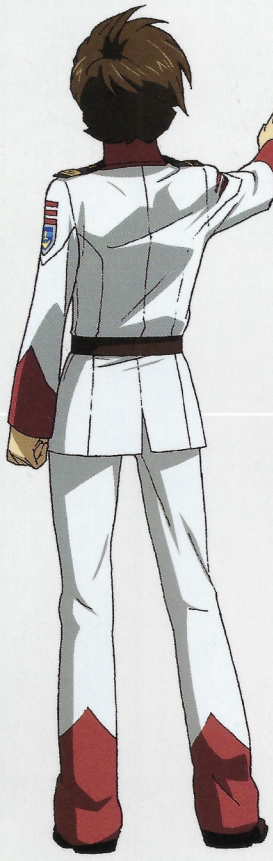

Susumu Kodai served aboard Yamato as Tactical Chief and completed the voyage to Iscandar. But the Earth that Yamato saved pushes a military buildup in the name of reconstruction, and Kodai is troubled. Then he receives a message from Teresa, appearing in the form of Juzo Okita, and senses it is a cry for help. His superiors, however, will not accept his advice that they answer it. Kodai gathers his former crewmates and sets out in Yamato on a voyage to Telezart.

Hunted for a time as rebels, Yamato pressed on toward Telezart, but Kodai, in command as Acting Captain, was torn. Facing crisis after crisis, how was he to honor Okita's promise to Starsha that the Wave-Motion Gun would stay sealed? That pressure wore Kodai down. Yet with Yuki Mori's devotion and the crew's support he overcame his doubts and grew as a commander. He came through the ordeal of Gatlantis's interference and reached Telezart. But the words Teresa spoke when they finally met would lead Kodai and Yamato into a new battle.

Guided by the words "Board Yamato" from the vision of Okita that Teresa showed him, Kodai leaves Earth. On the voyage he faces many trials.

Character

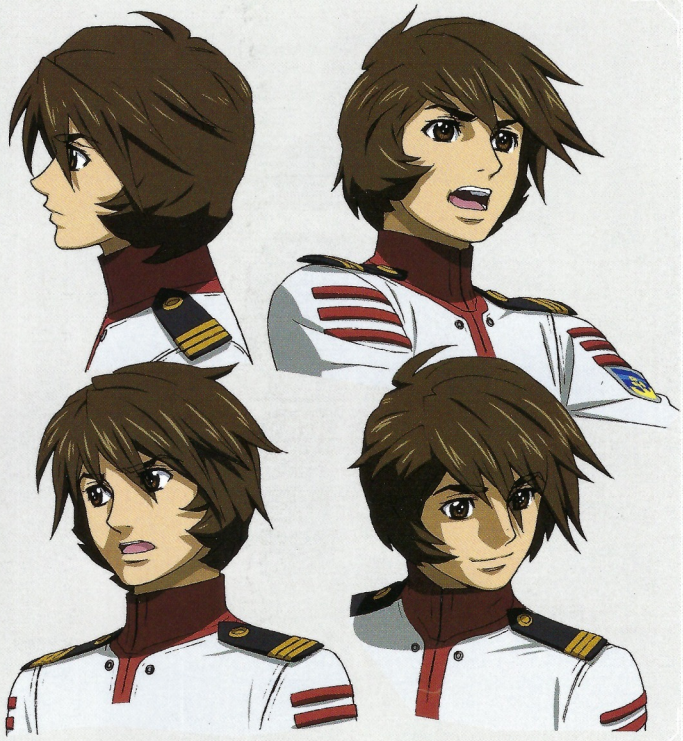

The Yamato crew uniform Kodai wore in 2202, unchanged in design from the voyage three years before. The red collar and cuffs mark the Tactical Dept.

Expressions

As on the voyage to Iscandar, Kodai has a strong sense of justice and duty. But holding fast to the late Okita's promise to Starsha sometimes made him rigid, which led to clashes with others. And, as Sakezo Sado said, he is "a sensitive man at heart": the many pressures could drive him into a corner.

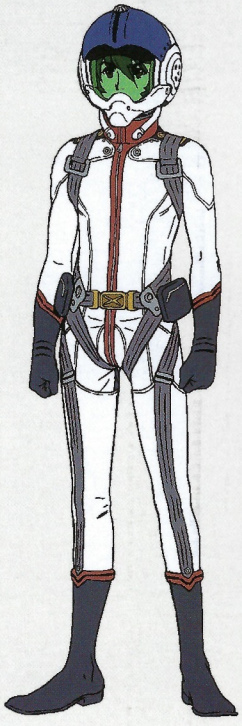

Out of concern for Yuki, and to burn his own bridges, Kodai refused to let her board Yamato. But touched by her feelings, which led her to stow away to follow him, he comes to look into his own heart.

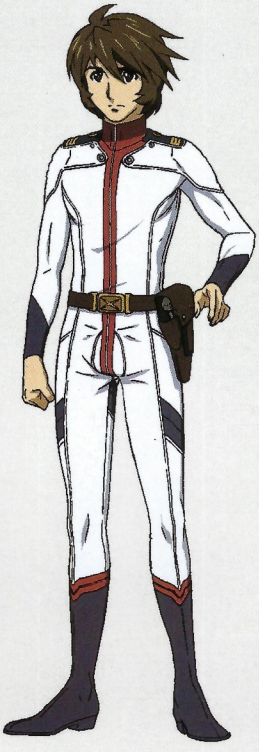

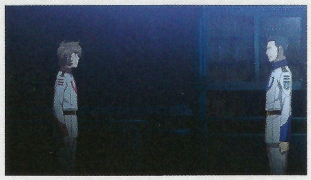

Pilot Suit

After the voyage to Iscandar Kodai stayed in the service, and by 2202 he captained Yuunagi, ship No. 47 of the 2nd Escort Destroyer Fleet (rank: Lieutenant). His skill as a pilot had not faded: when trying to reach the Garmillas embassy on the Moon, he flew a Type 100 space recon plane himself to break through a swarm of anti-terror drones.

When Yamato set out, Shiro Sanada named him Acting Captain, and he took the helm of the new voyage. But his steady caution about using the Wave-Motion Gun at times drew criticism from Hajime Saito.
